

CETL Weekly Teaching Tips presents

Reflection: Your Turn

Look Out for the Next-Semester You

Like students, we eagerly look forward to closing a semester. Before diving into grading, take 15 minutes recognize the successes and failures of the semester that are fresh in your mind. Write them down, assign beneficial actions to each, and set a deadline for those actions. You will thank yourself next semester!

Questions to Get You Going

For ideas and resources on reflection, visit oakland.edu/teachingtips

Date: April 18, 2016

How should timing of activities be different next semester?

What should we spend more time on?

What can be eliminated?

Which classes stood out as the best? How can this happen more often in the future?

What three small improvements would I like to make to this course next time?

Alarm Set to Review on Monday, August 8, 2016

Created by the Center for Excellence in Teaching and Learning at Oakland University.