Performance Season Preview Fall 2016

Our students and faculty are back on campus, working hard and rehearsing so they can fill our performance spaces with glorious sights and sounds. We also have an impressive lineup of guest performers, directors and choreographers ready to work with our students and entertain you. For a full listing of performances please visit our website and check our online calendar. You can also view a PDF of our 2016-2017 Season Brochure. We really do have music to suit all tastes. The Oakland Symphony Orchestra has two dates in the fall, October 2 and November 6. The November concert may be of particular interest to lovers of more modern symphonic music, since it features music by Leonard Bernstein, Mason Bates, Aaron Copland and George Gershwin. Read more.

Sarah McEneaney

Working In The Arts: September 2016 MTD Alumni News

Theatre alumna Sarah McEneaney (BFA '16) is moving to New York to study with the SITI Company's 2016-17 Conservatory Class whose artists participate in a rigorous, immersive program emphasizing training for performance and the creation of new work."I was first introduced to SITI's methodologies at Oakland," said Sarah, "and it really resonated with me. I'm thrilled to have the opportunity to further my training and create new theatrical work both collaboratively and individually." You can read more about the SITI Company on their website. Read more.

Robert Skylis

September 2016 MTD News

An impressive number of OU music educators attended July's International Society for Music Education (ISME) conference in Glasgow, Scotland. Among them were seven PhD alumni, all of whom presented their research which you can read about in our Working in the Arts News story, and two current doctoral students – Cierra Mixdorf and Joshua James. James presented a well-received session on teaching jazz authentically. Laura Rasmussen, a master's student, also attended, as did department chair Distinguished Professor Jackie Wiggins and music program director Associate Professor Deborah VanderLinde. In July, voice student Robert Skylis was the winner in the men's Lower College (freshman and sophomore) category of the National Student Auditions at the National Association of Teachers of Singing (NATS) National Conference in Chicago. Read more
