Statement of Purpose: The Oakland Journal is meant to serve three purposes: 1) to provide an open forum for university people to get to know each other's work and creative energies; 2) to provide a marketplace of ideas that will work to the general benefit; and 3) to provide a beacon to students on the importance of writing and a place for them to achieve their first publication.

Advice to Authors: We prefer articles from Oakland University faculty, staff, students and alumni. Generally, articles should be 15 double-spaced pages or fewer. Email submissions if possible. Deadlines are July 1 for the fall issue and Nov.1 for the winter issue. We invite submissions concerning research, creative work, material that would be of interest to other OU people and our neighbors, and that which will enhance intellectual exchange and discussion for the benefit of Oakland University.

Editorial decisions are made in consultation with associate editors. Submissions should be sent in Microsoft Word format via U.S. mail to Managing Editors, Oakland Journal, Writing Center, 212 Kresge Library, Oakland University, Rochester, MI 48309 or by email to TOJ@oakland.edu. We prefer email submissions.

Getting a Copy: Copies are provided without charge upon request to all Oakland University faculty, staff and students. Others may purchase a copy for $3.50. Full time faculty and administrative level staff receive each issue automatically. Current or previous articles are downloadable at the journal's website archives, <http://www2.oakland.edu/oujournal/>.

Funding Support: The Oakland Journal is made possible by generous support from the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost.
