Reading Recovery Center of Michigan at Oakland University Literacy Support Requirements (for Classroom Teachers, Title I/Reading Specialists)

Background

The 2004 reauthorization of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) provides districts with important options for meeting the literacy needs of struggling students. The new IDEA permits (a) qualifying early intervening services and professional development for teachers and (b) using ‘response to intervention’ as an alternative method for identifying children with learning disabilities and as a means of providing early intervention to all children at risk for school failure without identification as learning disabled. The new IDEA provides districts with the opportunity to implement Reading Recovery as part of a comprehensive literacy plan and to promote professional collaborations among Reading Recovery, general education, special education, and reading teachers on behalf of struggling readers (Lose, 2008, 2007, 2005; Lose et al., 2007).

In the interest of collaboration and in recognition of the benefits to teachers and students, schools have requested that special education teachers, Title I/reading specialists have access to Reading Recovery training without the requirement of teaching a full load of students (4 slots of Reading Recovery children; minimum of 8 students each year) as required by Reading Recovery Standards in the United States (2004) and the Oakland University RDG 539 course syllabus. This training will allow teachers with a variety of roles in a school to participate in the Reading Recovery training course without having to restructure their school work load. These teachers will be introduced to the complex literacy processing model that informs Reading Recovery in order to support the learning of children who need early intervention and/or follow-up support for literacy learning. Training in Literacy Support will permit classroom teachers and reading specialists to optimally collaborate with Reading Recovery teachers in support of children’s literacy learning.

Drawing on observations of the success of the Literacy Lessons™ training established at Oakland University, the following requirements for Literacy Support training have been established for OU:

1. Features of Literacy Support Training for Classroom Teachers, Title I/Reading Specialists in Reading Recovery Schools Affiliated with the Reading Recovery Center of Michigan at Oakland University:

- 1.1. A training program undertaken and monitored by the RDG 539 course supervisor at Oakland University. This course is a collaborative effort among the district, teacher and Oakland University with the tuition invoiced by the Reading Recovery Center of Michigan and paid by the participating district.
- 1.2. Classroom teachers, Title I/reading specialists participate in the regular Reading Recovery training class beginning in the fall, but register for RDG 590 Independent Study: “Literacy Support Training” (for 8 credits) with completion and final grade at the end of the summer I semester. This does not include Reading Recovery certification. (See 2.0 - 2.3.9 for requirements of Certification in Reading Recovery option.)
- 1.3. Candidates for this training must be working in Reading Recovery schools in districts committed to the full implementation of Reading Recovery.
- 1.4. Classroom teachers, Title I/reading specialists will be required to tutor two Reading Recovery children (from among the eligible children in the school’s first grade/s) daily during the training year (e.g. a minimum of 4 students total during the academic year).
- 1.5. The balance participants in the training class must be carefully considered. The recommended ratio is 2:1 (one Literacy Support trainee to every two Reading Recovery trainees).
- 1.6. Permission of the sponsoring school district administration for the student’s participation in the Literacy Support training. The school district pays the student’s tuition.

2. Certification in Reading Recovery Option for Classroom Teachers, Title I/Reading Specialists in Reading Recovery Schools Affiliated with the Reading Recovery Center of Michigan at Oakland University:

Teachers who successfully complete Literacy Support training in Year One are eligible to pursue certification in Reading Recovery in the following year, Year Two, with the permission of the teacher leader and principal, and under the following conditions outlined in sections 2.1 through 2.3.9, as follows:

- 2.2. Fulfill requirements of the Standards and Guidelines for the Certification of Reading Recovery Teachers
- 2.3. During this year of ongoing training, teachers must:

- 2.3.1. Teach 4 Reading Recovery children daily (minimum 8-12 students per year) with ongoing study of and reference to An Observation Survey of Early Literacy Achievement and Literacy Lessons Designed for Individuals, to guide the assessment and teaching of children
- 2.3.2. Comply with all requirements for record keeping and data analysis in accord with Reading Recovery
- 2.3.3. Submit data on children taught to the International Data Evaluation Center (IDEC)

- 2.3.7. Receive a minimum of four visits to their teaching from their teacher leader through the school year; to include the teaching of two of their four students at each visit
- 2.3.8. Complete professional readings and responses to readings assigned by the teacher leader throughout the year.
- 2.3.9. Earn a score of mostly 5s and 4s on all of the components of the RDG 539 evaluation rubric.

I agree to the requirements of training in Literacy Support. I agree that a student taking training in Literacy Support is included as part of the total number of students required for a full training class (RDG 539) only during the year they are taking the 8-credit course. I understand the requirements of the Certification in Reading Recovery option (following successful completion of training in Literacy Support).
