- 4). Enrollment: Provost Thompson indicated that there are 900 students who were enrolled in the Fall semester that did not return to classes in the Winter semester. She expressed concern about this loss and said that the best way to improve the downward trend is retention. She noted that among the 900, there are 400 juniors and seniors who did not return, and 300 FTIACs. She said the goal is to get all students to the finish line.
- 5). She announced that OU is serving on the National Survey of Student Engagement for which first year and senior students will receive an invitation. Undergraduate Enrollment Report : Dawn Aubry was present to provide an update on the overall undergraduate enrollment situation. She said that the bottom line is that the enrollment needs to grow though higher education is navigating difficult demographic changes. She observed that community colleges have reshaped enrollment landscape because they have been widened to include more programs, as well as emphasize the 25-year and older student groups, for example. She noted that OU is the third largest transfer destination among the public institutions, although we used to be the first. She stated that articulation agreements are also very critical. She asserted that OU has outperformed our peers, and she said we are one of the only universities who have had higher numbers of enrollment this year when compared to last year. She added that we are the sixth largest public university in Michigan. She said that the graduate enrollment also grew in the Fall 2025 semester. She stressed that retention is the key strategy in enrollment, more important than recruitment, and that total enrollment was up 1.3%.= 15,979 in Fall 2025. She stated that there is an excellent first generation scaling initiative and that OU is expanding elements of the DREAM pilot program with success coaching and early alerts, as well as enhancing financial literacy and wraparound support. She emphasized that enrollment is not just up to one office, but rather is a collective effort across the university. She thanked everyone for all they do to aid retention.

B. Approval of the Minutes from December 11, 2025

The minutes from the meeting of December 11, 2025 were approved (51 yes, 0 no).

C. UNFINISHED BUSINESS

1. SUBSTANTIVE MOTION brought forward by the University Committee on Undergraduate Instruction (UCUI) to modify the Undergraduate Degree Requirement Policy in the Undergraduate Catalog changing the credit hour requirements from "a minimum of 120 credit hours" to "a minimum threshold of 90 credit hours; in alignment with HLC policy." (Kristin Landis-Piwowar)

MOVED to accept the language change to the Undergraduate Degree Requirement Policy as presented.*

There was a great deal of discussion on this topic. Matthew Seidel started the discussion off by saying that the number one obstacle for students to complete their education at OU is the cost which can get as high as $30,000 to $40,000. He said students understand that tuition increases are necessary but he stated that education at OU is getting very expensive, and college needs to be more affordable for everyone. He noted that OU students who were polled like the idea of credit reduction in programs. Senator Johnson addressed the problem of affordability also, noting that he has an uncle who had to leave OU due to affordability, and went to a Community College to complete his education. He said the high cost is a problem, and the university should work to save students money. Kelsey Luka had a message on behalf of her mother who explained her efforts to get her degree, thus speaking for non-traditional students. She said a reduced credit degree could make education more affordable and accessible for non-traditional students because it is very challenging for those who return to complete education after or while raising a family, so the reduced credit program would ease financial burden, allow people to obtain goals more efficiently and open the door to many non-traditional students. Senator Dinda said that he is for the decrease but did not believe it would work for his program. He suggested that OU should look at the Gen Ed requirement because that is very heavy for science students. Senator Margerum-Leys spoke in favor of the reduced credit policy which he said would give greater flexibility to students. He noted that if the program goals can be achieved with fewer credits, then departments should be allowed to create such programs which would provide flexibility in the curriculum. Dean Randall spoke in favor of this program to reduce course credits and pointed out it would not close doors for students going to graduate school. She observed that in addition, these lower credit programs are going on all around the world. She pointed out that the main thing is what students learned in their programs. Senator Johnson added that the Student Congress had passed unanimous support for this program. Senator Kattner said that she is very much in support of this policy for her dance program, and added that the dance faculty is in support. Senator Carpenter echoed Dean Randall's endorsement and stated that the reduced credit program concept is not a deterrent for people to get into graduate school. He said that it would be a welcome benefit for some of the Medical School students. Senator Fails said he appreciates colleagues' thoughts about which programs are well-suited, but he is concerned about a race to the bottom for a whole swath of programs if they are reduced to 90 credits. He expressed concern and said it is important not to be naive about the dynamics that this could introduce in terms of competition between departments. He added that there could be a potential conflict when a student adds a minor which could make their course not available for financial aid support. Mr. Mitton brought up the system in Canada, noting that for 50 years throughout Ontario almost every program exists as 3 year or 4 year degrees. Dean Chamra said it is possible to maintain the same rigor with reduce credit programs. He noted that engineering technology would be a great program for reduced credit, with opportunity for collaborations with a Community College. He noted that engineering programs have to be accredited so that means it is necessary to maintain the rigor. He added that for lower income families it would be a big help to prevent them from paying back education bills for many years. Senator Miller expressed skepticism about the program. She said she is in favor of lowering student cost, but she said this is a band-aid to the problem of expensive higher education. She said it would have some impact for some students but does not resolve the problem of the cost of higher ed which has very deep roots. She worries that having this reduced credit program as a possibility would delay the solution of the problems of higher education. She acknowledges that some programs may be able to accomplish their goals in 90 credits, but she worries that there would be intense pressure for departments to reduce their credit requirements. She said we have to think carefully about our reputation, and added that she thinks it will decrease the number of minors and double majors, and have a significant impact on the liberal arts education at OU. Senator Hodges asked whether the point of higher education is to get students jobs, or is there a higher goal. He said we would be giving up a lot, that reducing programs by 30 credits is a lot, and he added that it should not be a cost discussion, but rather a thought discussion. Senator Seidel said the students understand the risks, but he said the policy is a realistic effort to reduce the costs for students and create more opportunities for more students to get a higher education. Senator Youngquist said he thinks this would turn into an unavoidable race to the bottom, and he stated that it would amount to a reduced education degree in reality. He said that students are not going to get the same education that 4 year students get. Senator Gilson asked how the determination will be made, whether there is a body that will determine how the programs would be created. She said Gen Ed program courses are very important because they introduce students to the world they are going to have to be working to create after they graduate, so we cannot make an informed decision if we don't know who is overseeing the programs that would make these changes. Ms. Thor said UCUI is the body that reviews any new degree program that would be proposed, and from there a proposal for a reduced credit program would go up through the governance. She clarified that students do qualify for financial aid if they go over 90 credits, and she noted that they regularly see students in BIS who have more than 120 credits. Acting Dean Piowar said nobody has to propose a reduced-credit program, so if there is a degree for which it makes sense, that is what the faculty have to determine, and in addition, these programs would ultimately come to the Senate and to the BOT. She said there would have to be a rigorous rationale in order to get a 90-credit program, as for any program. Mr. Chabi asked why programs are not able to decide how many Gen Ed credits their students take. Senator Wasserman said there is a faulty logic in a lot of the arguments he had heard. He noted that mostly the discussion has been about reducing costs, but he was not hearing the importance of getting a high quality higher education. He said democracy and education matter and it should be about value as well as costs. He agreed we should be thinking about cutting tuition but if the goal is to reduce costs for lower income students, instead we would be giving them a reduced quality education. He said students should be protesting rising tuition. Senator Pierce said this proposal needs to be rethought because a 120 credit program cannot be taught in 90 credits. Instead we need to put aside thinking about reducing the credits of the programs we have, and think instead of creating programs that start at zero and get to 90 credits since turning the same 4-year degree into a 3-year degree cannot be done. Senator Seidel emphasized that the students do not want to reduce quality. Senator Hosch said we should think about what is our call to action as a university, and we need to think about who our students are. This does not mean that we have to take what we have and make them fewer credits, but to create programs that work at 90-credits which can only happen by being allowed to innovate because the students are telling us that that is what they need in our student population.

Senators then voted on the motion.

The motion was approved: 30 yes, 28 no.
